

Portland Monthly Magazine

Mt. Hood

From Peak to Valley: An Insider's Guide

December 2009

Edited by Brian Barker

By Rachel Ritchie, Christopher Van Tilburg,
Kasey Cordell, and Kelly O'Connor

Cascade Huts

Find It!

These three recently opened metal-frame cabins set along Forest Service roads in the White River Valley and along Barlow Ridge now accommodate local winter backcountry outings. Hardcore skiers and snowshoers can trek in for a quick overnight stay at one of the cabins or link them up for extended outings. Each hut is outfitted with eight pine bunks, sleeping bags and pads, lanterns, a propane stove and heater, and basic kitchen utensils, but you'll need to haul in your own food and water—small pittance for a few nights of deep, snowy solitude. —BB

From $150. 866-430-4559; cascadehuts.com

Photo: Courtesy Peter Frick-Wright

